

Having It All: Hosted by Niki Taylor

December 13, 2012

Dr. Andrew Nelson, Harvard and UCLA board certified dermatologist, joins supermodel Niki Taylor on "Having It All" to discuss Fractora by Invasix.

Fractora treats multiple signs of aging by heating the deeper levels of the skin and allowing collagen to remodel and resurface itself.

Dr. Nelson points out that the face is usually the first to get wrinkles from sun damage and aging. Fractora helps in fighting that battle by gently applying heat through small micro pins using fractionated radio-frequency energy. This targets multiple layers of the skin, treating discoloration on the surface layers, and wrinkles in the deeper layers.

This procedure is very safe and because of its flexibility the patient can choose their length of downtime. If the patient decides that they want a more aggressive treatment, then downtime can take up to a few days. Alternatively, patients can choose a series of mild treatments that have no downtime at all.

Niki was so excited about Fractora that Dr. Nelson returned to the studio after hours to give her an exclusive treatment. She absolutely loved the session and calls Fractora a real breakthrough.
